We are talking about one of the most useful and used materials by man: glass. Millennia of human history are linked to this material, starting from obsidian, up to the most elaborate contemporary objects; in between there is everything.

This documentary offers a full immersion in the history of the Italian glass, using Venice (Murano), as the ideal sample since it represents all of what has made this art an Italian excellence. This documentary will be a real journey across the history of glass craftsmanship, from antiques to the most modern creations.

Synopsis

We will deal with the phenomenon of street art as a national cultural current which, due to the specific characteristics of each city, has taken on different connotations and developments in each urban area. In the first season we observe the history of Street Art as it developed in Milan.

Graffiti and murals are also told from a different perspective, highlighting their use for the redevelopment of suburban areas, as well as other public spaces returned to the city where today cultural and recreational activities take place.

BARMAN & BARTENDERS

Synopsis

In this documentary we will closely observe the figure of the barman, the sometimes-spectacular way in which he prepares cocktails, the different types of ingredients, from the most common to the most sought-after, but also the meticulous care for the presentation and experimentation of new combinations. To make a cocktail, the barman must know all the elements that make it up and in what percentage and must know how to mix them perfectly.

An important aspect of the profession is the stage presence: professional barmen have the ability to make cocktails by performing extremely rapid and choreographic technical gestures; in particular, the spectacularization of the barman's working technique – known as “flair bartending” – provides acrobatic movements similar to those of jugglers. The documentary also explores the background of this fascinating profession. From sight to taste, the bartender must know how to capture and satisfy the customer.

Synopsis

Documentary focused on beer and its production. Through the eyes and experiences of five protagonists, the stories that have allowed the creation of their own artisan company will be told. A subjective storytelling, empirical and yet romantic, which wants to show how every geographical reality, despite part of the same incipits, can diversify in such a profound way as to become one of a kind.

Each brewery will be honored by a conclusive tribute made by a particular character: The Beer Chef. The chef will dedicate a dish to each brewery, using the most particular beer of that manufacturer as an ingredient, as incontrovertible proof of the relationship that beer claims, like or more than wine, with the art of cooking.

Synopsis

We will talk about the pictorial art that allows the decoration of the human body; that of the tattoo is a tradition that we find far back in time.

Through the testimonies of tattoo artists and tattooed subjects, the value attributed to the art of tattooing in the past comes to light, how it has changed over time and its cultural, anthropological, magical-curative and aesthetic value, up to the current dimension. An excursus from the origins to the present day.

Tattoos have been religious, therapeutic, noble, and punitive. From tattoos of artisans to those of Camorra, crime and marginalization; from tattoos of hippies up to those of sailors. This is revealed as an Italian tradition still largely unknown today, which passes through the meshes of history, from north to south, through wars, professions, religious orders, love, vanity and power. You will discover the power of ink-on-skin communication.

Synopsis

The documentary tells the story, evolution and transformation of clubbing in Milan. “Clubbing” is an English term that can be translated as “going to clubs”. In reality there is a much deeper and more cultural meaning in the Anglo-Saxon meaning of the term. Clubs, discos and electronic music offer a privileged point of view for reading society and its changes: artistic, social, cultural, political, of customs. In particular, a city like Milan, which has always been a crucial place in the Italian and world panorama, if viewed and narrated from the point of view of the night, offers an interesting perspective on the changes of the country: from the 70s to the brilliant 80s, from the confused 90’ s until the sudden change of the last decade.

In Milan, music, fashion, art, counterculture, television, and the alternative and special characters that orbit these worlds often converge in the disco’ s “free port”, a place where judgment is suspended and where trends and social trends are anticipated. The documentary shares all this with a strong, deep and pop narrative all at the same time, and with the testimonies of DJs, promoters, club owners, event organizers, “excellent” clubbers and historical protagonists of the Milanese night, from the 70s to today, and with an eye also to the future.

Synopsis

For some, the darkest mechanisms of the Internet have been a curse, as in the most serious cases of revenge porn that have occupied the pages of national newspapers in recent years, while for others the sharing of one's own individual experience has become a means of daily confrontation with those who have a similar life path or simply for a progressive normalization of life stories much more common than we believe.

We will talk to girls and guys about their sexual sphere on social networks, some in a way more playful, others making it an art, still others for informational purposes, while some even built a career. Thanks to each of their points of view, an overall picture of the relationship between sexuality and the internet emerges for the new generations.

Synopsis

The Lion is the symbol of Venice, but also of courage: that of a city and - in our case - of a Film Festival and a media event that did not give up and stubbornly “wanted” to be realized in spite of the world around, of Codiv19 and the great uncertainty that dominates the global situation.

In an ‘abnormal’ city, never seen before so deprived of tourists and the general chaos that - in general - characterizes it between the end of August and the beginning of September, our story begins, made up of a Venice never seen before and - therefore - little or nothing told cinematically. A crescendo of emotions, which between stage and behind the scenes, between what passes in front of the screen and what remains behind involves the viewer in depth.

Synopsis

Many of the musical genres that are popular in Italy at the moment, such as urban and it-pop, have several aspects in common. If up to twenty years ago most bands, or individual artists, emerged after a long apprenticeship made up of provincial stages, competitions, demos, rehearsal rooms, covers, the new stars of today and tomorrow do everything without even leaving the bedroom.

They are very young, tech-savvy: they publish songs that they write, produce and record on their own, often without having a real musical training.

Their stages are social media and streaming platforms. This documentary is the portrait of a generation in which pure instinct, creativity and media strategy coexist in a precarious balance, and aims to show lights and shadows through the testimonies of those directly involved and those of industry experts.

Synopsis

It is the beginning of the twentieth century, the three brothers Peppino, Titina and Eduardo, live with their beautiful and young mother, Luisa De Filippo. There is no father in the family, or rather he hides in the shoes of “uncle” Eduardo Scarpetta, the most famous, rich and acclaimed actor and playwright of his time. Scarpetta, while not recognizing the three natural children, introduced them to the world of theater as children.

On the death of the great actor, his legitimate children share his inheritance, while Titina, Eduardo and Peppino are entitled to nothing. To the three young men, however, “uncle” Scarpetta passed on a special gift, his great talent, which, on the other hand, did not reach his legitimate son Vincenzo, also an actor and playwright, who became the owner of his father’s company.

The redemption from the painful family history passes through the formation of the trio De Filippo, a dream cherished for years by Eduardo and his brothers and finally realized, overcoming difficulties and conflicts.

That of the De Filippo is the story of a family wound that turns into art. And of three young siblings, who, by joining forces, give life to a completely new way of telling reality with a vision that reaches into the future.

Synopsis

Conformista Ribelle is a docufilm that recounts the decisive moments, the turning points and the roller coaster of a brilliant, eventful international career and the daring existence of a great Italian artist. From his origins as the son of N.N. to the conquest of great international fame as a director, art director, painter, creator of cinema, theater and opera. Through original and vintage interviews with some of the most acclaimed stars who have known, admired and loved him and with family, friends and closest collaborators, this engaging story does justice to the person and the artist - not just “The Master” - in all its multifaceted and even opposing facets. His dualistic character is manifested in his vast artistic production, but also in his political choices, in his spirituality and love for mystery, in friendships and in the legendary controversies with critical opponents. This clash of opposites will offer a well-rounded portrait, with continuous ups and downs, of an artist who has promoted and honored the highest and most popular Italian culture in the great world capitals for many decades.

Synopsis

January 1943, Russian Front. Company 604 is forced to cross the steppe to escape the enemy encirclement. When night comes, however, of the whole 604 only six Alpini plus a mule remain, advancing in silence, under an incessant snow, while the temperature touches 40 below zero.

The exasperating journey, made in that white desert, pushes men to lose the perception of time and, step by step, leads them to take refuge in a dreamlike dimension where there is a “second path” made up of dreams, nightmares and memories. A long night of war and a human journey, between balke, woods, mountain lakes, burning villages, snowy beaches and wheat fields.

Synopsis

A 38-year-old American psychiatrist (widowed and without kids) arrives in a rich farm in Colombia, after being called to solve the case of a disturbed child. She was called by the child's mother, who was worried about the increasingly insistent accusations by the local priest and the farmers – tormented by mysterious adverse events – that the child is the devil. When the doctor arrives, she discovers that the boy's mother is dead and that the father himself has begun to believe in the possible possession of the child. While the woman tries to psychoanalyze the child, the nefarious events intensify and her “cure” becomes a race to save the little boy from the fury of his fellow citizens... and perhaps even from himself, when she herself begins to fear that what is happening in the “hacienda” has to do with something horrible and supernatural.

Synopsis

Filippo (Simone Montedoro) and Michela (Daniela Virgilio) are a married couple on the verge of separation and parents of Francesco (Alessio Di Domenicantonio), a smart and lively nine-year-old boy. In court, due to the couple's dispute over who should keep the family home and the impossibility of determining which parent is the right one for the child to live with, the judge surprisingly assigns the house to the child and decides that the mother and father will alternate living in the house every Monday. However, the ruling is temporary: with the help of a social worker's supervision, the judge will decide after six months which parent will be granted custody of the child at home. Francesco interprets the ruling in his own way and, encouraged by his group of friends, convinces himself that he is the boss of the house, leading to comical situations, such as secretly organizing a party advertised on social media that fills the house with rowdy kids, even attracting police intervention. Severely reprimanded by the social worker, Filippo and Michela blame each other, backed by their respective families (Corinne Clery e Maurizio Mattioli). Francesco, like any child, longs for his parents' reconciliation and realizes that he has caused worse arguments. He tries to make amends by behaving as an obedient and helpful child. He even attempts to bring his parents back together, but new suitors for both his mother and father appear on the horizon, complicating the situation further, culminating during the Christmas Eve dinner.
